

DISB Seeks Public Input on Access to Banking Services and Small Business Capital

Are you a District of Columbia resident without a checking or savings account? Do you use check cashers instead of a bank? Are you a small business owner who has had difficulty qualifying for a loan? If so, we want to hear from you.

The D.C. Department of Insurance, Securities and Banking, the city's financial services regulator, is conducting city-wide surveys to study the barriers to banking services for District of Columbia residents and access to capital challenges for small and local businesses.

By taking the survey and/or participating in a focus group, you have a unique opportunity to provide input that might shape future policy that affects how, where and when banks serve the D.C. community.

You can take the surveys online by visiting disb.dc.gov/banksurvey. Thank you for participating in this important effort.
